

The interference BPL will cause to a number of radio services in the HF and VHF bands is a serious problem that I believe the FCC is overlooking. The influence of special interests and especially the power companies should not override the risks to public safety and the right of the radio spectrum users.

The idea that the power companies will move quickly and completely to an interference complaint has not had to deal with a noisy pole transformer or line with their local power company.